THE NEED OF LESS.

Although in traveling life's track,
We'll have to acquiesce
That we've some things, but still we lack
The more important less.

The hope seems scant, but it must be
That yet the day will dawn
When we can look outdoors and see
A dandelionless lawn.

We don't expect unheard-of things—
Such as a thornless rose;
But we should like to have, by Jingo,
A holeless garden hose.

Likewise, it seems as if there ought,
With such invention endless,
To be a place where could be bought
A lawn mower that was tendies.

And how it would help out a chap
If there were any means
For him to get his morning nap
Behind some flyless screens.

And furthermore we rather feel
That we'd be to the good
If fate would give us, in the deal,
A neighborless neighborhood.

Queen Alexandra and Three of Her Favorite Dogs.

Queen Alexandra of England is said to possess the only pure Chinese Chow in the United Kingdom. Two of these dainty little pets are shown in the picture and on the garden chair sits her faithful old shepherd dog.

Chow dogs are immensely fashionable at the moment, and find a devoted patron in the Queen who has a number of these valuable animals in the kennels at Sandringham palace. This year the Queen was presented with some very valuable Chinese chows by Captain Greville, who commissioned Captain Hamer, of the Indian frontier forces, to find specimens of a pure bred Chinese chow if possible. After six months Captain Hamer at length found the objects of his search, and the animals were promptly dispatched to England, reaching Sandringham a few days after Christmas.

The Queen is a great lover of dogs, and the kennels at Sandringham contain examples of many rare types. There are basnet hounds, great favorites of the Queen, borzoi, chows and many others. There are few shows of any importance at which the Sandringham kennels are not represented, and in the past few years Her Majesty has won close on fifty prizes and medals.

Here is a good story about General Creagh, who is to succeed Lord Kitchener as commander of the British forces in India. He spends most of his time when off duty at the Naval and Military Club, in Piccadilly, London.

He was writing in one of the rooms early one morning and happened to drop his pocketbook on the floor. Being somewhat preoccupied he did not notice his loss and left the room.

Presently one of the waiters found the book, and seeing the General's name on it hastened after it.

General Creagh thanked him for his services saying how glad he was it had been recovered. To his amusement the servant said, "Yes sir, I am glad I saw it before any of the members came in."

Woman's Club Meeting.

The Department of Social of the Woman's Club held its monthly meeting yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock. The club feature of the afternoon was the Parliamentary Drill led by Miss Laura C'ay. This was the last meeting of this department for the season, and Mrs. Warner S. Kinkead, the chairman, gave an interesting report of the work done this year. This department has been very fortunate in having many prominent speakers with them this season. This has added quite a feature to the programs, which have always been much enjoyed and appreciated.

The Louisville Post of last evening had the following account of a wedding of much interest:

One of the most brilliant and beautiful weddings solemnized recently took place last evening at 3 o'clock when Miss Bessie Mather Applegate and Mr. Edwin B. H. Tower Jr. of New York, were married at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Edvard Applegate, 1234 Third Avenue.

The house was most beautifully decorated, similar and cut flowers being arranged in all the rooms. The ceremony took place in the drawing room before the silver mantle, which, with its decoration of green and white flowers, made a beautiful setting for the bride. In the center of the mantle was a large basket filled with ascension lilies and lilies of the valley, the green and white cut flowers massed on each side. Tall white satin standards filled with ferns and white roses and ascension lilies were placed on each side of the mantle. In the hall and dimmerooms the smilax was effectively used and lilies and pink hydrangeas were charmingly used in the decoration. The mantels were massed with the blossoms and huge bunches of white lilies were tied to the newel posts at the foot of the stairs.

Worley's Orchestra, which was seated under the stairs, played a musical program throughout the evening, and as the Lohengrin bridal chorus was played Miss Applegate came down the front stairs with her father, who gave her in marriage. She had no attendants, the Rev. B. M. Meisick, of the Methodist Episcopal church, who performed the impressive ceremony and the groom and his best man, Mr. Williams, awaiting at the altar.

Miss Applegate made a charming bride and was beautiful in her bridal robe. Her dress was of white duchess satin, draped in white chiffon hand embroidered in silver and wood fiber. The lace, the bodice made with half sleeves and Dutch neck. She wore the conventional tulle veil caught in her hair with orange blossoms, and carried a French bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Mrs. W. E. Applegate the mother of the bride, was gowned in white hand-embroidered Marquise over satin and carried a bunch of lavender orchids.

Mrs. Edwin Tower Sr. of New York, the groom's mother were a costume of cream mullaline satin, embroidered in white and trimmed in duchess lace.

Miss Claire Glenn of Nashville wore a pale lavender chiffon gown trimmed in silver and lace.

Miss Mamie Applegate, sister of the bride, wore a pale pink chiffon gown over white silk. The gown was made with a French coat of cream silk lace.

Mrs. W. L. Bliss, of Brooklyn, New York, wore a princess gown of pale blue liberty satin, trimmed in duchess lace.

A reception followed the ceremony, after which a beautiful supper was served.

The circular bridal table was covered with a white satin damask cloth, with a cluny lace border. Pink and lavender hydrangeas were combined in a silver plaque in the center of the table, around which silver candlesticks with pink and silver shades were placed. The silver compotes held pink and lavender bouquets.

Those seated were:

Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Tower, Misses Nancy Wilson, Claire Glenn, Jessie Davie, Mary Youngman, Messrs. John Tower of New York; Hugh Adams, Richard Williams, Dr. James Guest.

After the ceremony and reception the bride and bridegroom left for Hot Springs, Virginia, and New York, to stay for some weeks.

The out-of-town guests were:

Mrs. Edwin H. Tower of New York, the mother of the bridegroom; Mr. John Tower, of New York; Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Bliss, of Brooklyn; Mr. James D. Simpson, of Cincinnati; Mr. Keene Addington, of Chicago; Mr. Martin Lindsey, of Milwaukee; Mr. J. H. Gleason, of Washington, Dr. W. F. Edson and Miss Claire Glenn, of Nashville.
